Jane E. Morgan née Zuknick earned a bachelor’s degree in hospitality administration in 1982 from Florida State University’s College of Business, from what is now the Dedman School of Hospitality.

During the many years she lived in the Tampa Bay area, Morgan was an industry consultant for a national accounting firm, providing a broad range of management advisory services to hospitality and real estate clients.

She volunteered with the Muscular Dystrophy Association and the Combined Health Appeal of Tampa Bay. Morgan was also affiliated with the retailer The Container Store during years she and her husband called Dallas, Texas, home.

Today, Morgan has made higher education the focus of her volunteerism. She is active in supporting the Women for Florida State University and the Dedman School of Hospitality, and she is a member of that program’s alumni organization, The Society of Hosts.

Morgan and her husband, a trustee with the University of South Florida Foundation and its Research Foundation, also support the Florida State colleges of Business, Medicine, Nursing and Visual Arts, Theatre & Dance, including the Master Craftsman Studio and the FSU/Asolo Conservatory for Actor Training in Sarasota, where they reside and are MFA student fellowship sponsors.

The Morgans are recognized in the Doak S. Campbell Society of the Florida State University Foundation Presidents Club. Continuing their commitment to higher education, they have also remembered Florida State with a planned estate gift and are recognized as members of the Westcott Society.
