America is a nation built on great ideas, a nation of thinkers and doers. Our creativity has brought about everything from the automobile industry and light bulb to life-saving vaccines and pharmaceuticals, with thousands of groundbreaking scientific and technological innovations in between. Many of these pioneering ideas, often realized through work achieved at the nation’s top colleges and universities, are the foundation on which the American dream is built. Without these ideas, or the resources to conceive them, where would we be?

Today, our nation and higher education face critical challenges. Since 2007, the state legislature has drastically reduced Florida State University’s funding by more than $105 million, entirely from operations and our academic programs. While U.S. News & World Report ranks Florida State University 42nd among all public universities and in the top 100 of all universities, our resources don’t even rank in the top 200. This means that every dollar we receive from our donors and taxpayers must be spent in the most deliberate way possible. As we move forward with our comprehensive fundraising campaign, the importance of private support is more vital than ever.

Many of you have heard me talk about the “big ideas” that will shape the future of Florida State University. These transformative ideas, created by our deans and faculty, are not only creative and collaborative in nature, but address important societal issues while advancing Florida State’s reputation for academic excellence. This 2012 Annual Report contains a few examples of these big ideas—the Veterans Legacy Complex and the Garnet and Gold Scholar Society—designed to firmly place Florida State on the world stage as the leader for developing innovative educational programs that prepare today’s students to become tomorrow’s innovators.

On behalf of all those who benefit from your generosity and belief in the power of higher education, I thank you. With your support, we will continue to positively impact the lives of our many students and alumni for generations to come.

With Seminole Pride,

Eric J. Barron, President, Florida State University
Many alumni and friends. Whether intended for scholarships, professorships, academic program support or facility upgrades, the Foundation makes certain that every gift, regardless of the amount or purpose, is used in accordance with donors’ wishes.

An investment in Florida State University is a wise one—one that greatly improves all aspects of our community, our state and our nation. Please know that we remain grateful to you for your generous support of, and continued commitment to, Florida State University.

Ashbel C. Williams, Chair, Florida State University Foundation Board of Trustees, 2010–2012
PRIVATE SUPPORT:
Making the Best Better

Wanting to make the best better was the catalyst that led Bob Sasser (B.S. ’73) and his wife, Pam, to donate $1 million to the Florida State University College of Business in June.

“We have talented students. We have great faculty and a terrific reputation at Florida State for educating and graduating business leaders. This reputation has propelled the College of Business to one of the 10 largest business schools in the country,” said Bob Sasser, president and CEO of Dollar Tree Inc. “Imagine what the College of Business could become with better tools and resources.”

The Sassers’ gift is designed to kick-start a campaign to raise funds to replace the aging Rovetta building, which has served as the home to the College of Business since its founding in the 1950s. While Sasser has pride in all aspects of Florida State, the Rovetta building hasn’t changed much since he attended classes there during the early 1970s. A new, state-of-the-art building will provide a tremendous increase in space and meet the changing demands of the 21st century business education.

And as his and his wife’s ability to donate has allowed, their philosophy has been: “If you can, you should give back.”

In recent years, the Sassers have contributed more than $200,000 that endowed two scholarships—the Bob and Pam Sasser Football Position Scholarship and the Bob and Pam Sasser Fellowship in Marketing Excellence.

They found satisfaction in establishing scholarships because they can see how their assistance is helping others. Their donation for the new building is different.

“Since the existing facility doesn’t match what Florida State’s College of Business represents, we decided to step up as the need became clear,” Bob Sasser said.

Tentatively called Legacy Hall, the proposed five-story building will provide the instructional, technological and collaborative spaces in which to educate the people who will influence tomorrow’s business world. It will open avenues for collaborative research among Florida State’s faculty, enabling the college to meet the training and continuing education needs of alumni and business partners.

“The Sassers’ gift is transformative for us,” said Caryn Beck-Dudley, dean for the College of Business. “We are a great business school currently housed in a modest facility. Legacy Hall will allow us to become an internationally pre-eminent business school prospering in a world-class facility. A magnificent building will define our future not only for our students, faculty and alumni but also for our friends and the business community at large.”
Repeatedly, Florida State University’s College of Business has been ranked among the best in the nation by U.S. News & World Report, with two of its programs consistently ranking in the top 10.

And that’s where the Sassers come in.

“To be competitive, attract and maintain the best faculty and the best students, we need a facility that meets the demands of being the best,” Bob Sasser said. “We wanted to give significantly enough to get attention, and we would like to challenge other alumni to be a part of this. People are going to want to be a part of this.”

Sasser has been the Chesapeake, Va.-based Dollar Tree’s president since 2001 and chief executive officer since 2004. His leadership skills, business acumen and commitment to excellence have contributed to the company’s growth and success.

He wants to bring that energy to Florida State as it works to raise the funding for the $65 million new building.

“The need has never been greater; institutional support is solid; we have a large and successful alumni base to call upon; and we can do this!”

From the Battlefield to the Classroom: Creating Pathways to Success

Transitioning from driving a 68-ton, $4 million hulking beast of a M1A1 tank and completing tours in Fallujah, Iraq, and Helmand Province, Afghanistan, to taking classes alongside students four to six years younger sometimes led senior Ryan Taylor to feel disconnected from the college experience. That’s where Florida State University’s Student Veterans Center comes in for Taylor and hundreds more like him.

“Veterans have a wide range of difficulties making the transition from military to student life,” said Taylor, president of Florida State’s Collegiate Veterans Association. “The problems can range from difficulty with VA education benefits to medical issues, including post-traumatic stress disorder. The Student Veterans Center staff gets to know every veteran individually to help them address their specific concerns.”

Florida State University’s commitment to veterans is to be the most veteran-friendly, empowering campus in the country. The University currently provides services tailored to each student veteran’s needs, offers networking opportunities and provides a base for the Collegiate Veterans Association.

“Being a part of the Collegiate Veterans Association has made all the difference in the world to me as I try to take care of the business of school but also try to find time to fit in with my fellow students and have a taste of the ‘college experience’ I gave up to wear a uniform,” Taylor, a Marine, said.

Since opening in 2011, the Student Veterans Center has assisted nearly 900 students and their families. Between fall 2011 and 2012, a phenomenal 87.5 percent of Florida State student veterans graduated or returned in pursuit of their degrees. To provide even more support for veterans—past, present and future—the University has embarked on a mission to develop the Veterans Legacy Complex. The facility will showcase the proud tradition of the U.S. military and provide a three-building complex for the Institute on World War II and the Human Experience, the Student Veterans Center and the Reserve Officer Training Corps (Army and Air Force) training facility. It is one of many transformative ideas that will be a priority during the University’s comprehensive fundraising campaign.

Helping lead the charge to fund the complex is retired Navy Vice Admiral Gordon S. Holder.
(B.M.E. ’68), who serves as chair of the veterans complex fundraising committee. He accompanied a University delegation, including Student Veterans Center Director William W. “Billy” Francis (B.A. ’86), to Washington, D.C., in April to meet with alumni and leaders in each branch of the military. These meetings culminated in a 90-minute meeting with Secretary of Veterans Affairs Eric K. Shinseki.

The group also sponsored a reception for New York City area alumni in May. The reception featured a guided tour of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point—further connecting the dots between military heritage and the purpose of the Veterans Legacy Complex.

“With support from alumni, veterans, friends of the University and corporations that value our student veterans, Florida State will provide a template for other universities to emulate,” said Holder, chairman of the Florida State University Foundation Board of Trustees.

In addition to the invaluable time Holder has dedicated to increasing awareness for the Veterans Legacy Complex, he and his wife, Patricia A. “Pat” Holder (B.S. ’69), have made a substantial, early contribution to jump-start fundraising.

The goal of the planned complex is to give campus-wide veterans’ support initiatives a physical presence, attract and retain student veterans, increase their graduation rates and improve job placement rates after graduation. As Shinseki told the Florida State delegation, “Everything is for naught unless these men and women complete their educations.”

Holder added, “It is not enough to build a building, there has to be meaningful interaction between student veterans, faculty and other students on campus. Our volunteers, many of whom served in the military, have made inroads in hiring veterans. Once our student vets obtain a quality education at Florida State, they will be even more attractive candidates in business and industry.”

More than $250,000 already has been donated to this project, and additional private philanthropy will make the vision of supporting veterans past, present and future a reality.

Most students can attest to the outstanding quality of programs and extracurricular activities available at Florida State University.

But 2012 Florida State graduate Keturah Brown discovered that one program—the Garnet and Gold Scholar Society—offers Florida State students an outlet to become student leaders in numerous dynamic ways.

“Many programs are good in their own way, but they usually focus on one area of development,” said Brown, who was among 74 students inducted into the society in April. “The Garnet and Gold Scholar Society goes beyond the classroom and facilitates interaction among students who are truly well-rounded. It brings out the best of the best, students who are go-getters and represent Florida State in the most positive way.”

The Garnet and Gold Scholar Society, launched in fall 2010 by Florida State University President Eric J. Barron, encourages students to participate in multiple facets of campus life and undergraduate opportunities. Garnet and Gold Scholar Society members take the initiative to grow academically, personally and professionally for the betterment of society.

Mary Coburn, Florida State University’s vice president for Student Affairs, knows what a difference a program like this can make for students.

“The students who participate in the program gain valuable skills that will prepare them for the next stage of their lives and contribute greatly to their success after they graduate,” Coburn said. “The Garnet and Gold Scholar Society represents the best of Florida State.”

Supporting the society was a natural fit for longtime Florida State University advocate Susie Busch-Transou and her husband, Tripp Transou, owners of Tri-Eagle Sales in Midway, Fla.

“As business owners, it was important to get behind this initiative and set a true leadership example in the community by giving back,” Busch-Transou said. “The Garnet and Gold Scholar Society is special because it cultivates engaged and well-rounded citizens, something Tripp and I encourage of our 120 employees.”

Busch-Transou, who currently serves as the Florida State University Board of Trustees vice chair and chair of the Student Affairs Committee, said it also was important to support a program that aligned with President Barron’s vision of making Florida State University the most student-centered university in the country.

“This program helps bridge the gap between what students learn, and encourages learning both inside and outside of the classroom,” Busch-Transou said. “Today’s employers want to know what a job candidate did in addition to going to class. The Garnet and Gold Scholar Society encourages students to take getting involved to the next level and gain invaluable real-world experience along the way.”
Financial Statement Overview

As is the case each year, the Foundation’s financial results for the 2012 fiscal year were shaped by the investment returns from its $400 million long-term investment portfolio. The Foundation’s investment performance for fiscal year 2012 can best be described as uneven. Following a disappointing first quarter that brought double-digit losses, the Foundation returned to breakeven by the end of March 2012, only to experience a slight loss in the fourth quarter of the fiscal year. Overall, the investment return for 2012 was -2.6 percent, which led to investment losses of $10 million on the financial statements, as compared to investment gains of $75.3 million the previous year. However, the Foundation did surpass its primary benchmark for the trailing one-, three-, five- and 10-year periods. One area that experienced significant improvement during fiscal 2012 was contribution revenue, which was up $7.3 million, or 25.9 percent, as compared to fiscal 2011. This increase was achieved even though the suspension of payments from the state of Florida’s matching gift programs remained in place again this year.

The Foundation’s statement of financial position reported total assets of $498 million as of June 30, 2012, as compared to $505 million in fiscal 2011. This represents a decrease of $7 million, or 1.4 percent, and was chiefly due to the decrease in the value of investments held by the Foundation. The majority of these assets, $460 million, are cash and investments that are either available to support current University programs or endowed for the purpose of generating income to support University programs in the future. In addition to these assets, the statement of financial position includes $15.7 million in pledges, most of which are scheduled to be received within the next five years. Other assets reported on the statement of financial position include $18.8 million in trusts. Assets not reported on the statement of financial position include $18.8 million in conditional promises and $49 million in outstanding state matching funds. Total liabilities as of June 30, 2012, were $12.6 million, as compared to $12.3 million in fiscal 2011. The most significant liabilities are the present value of future annuity payments of $6.3 million and deferred revenue of $3.8 million.

Fundraising totals for fiscal 2012 were very comparable to the two previous fiscal years. During the year, the Foundation raised $50.4 million in gifts, as compared to $50.9 million in fiscal 2011 and $51.8 million in fiscal 2010. Expenditures in support of Florida State University totaled more than $38 million in fiscal 2012. This included $37.5 million for University programs and $700,000 for construction of new facilities. The $37.5 million in program support reflects an increase of $1 million, or 2.7 percent, over fiscal 2011 and continued a trend since fiscal 2008 of increased reliance on Foundation funds by the University. The $700,000 in support of facility construction and renovation reflects a decrease of $2.9 million, or 80.5 percent, as compared to fiscal 2011. This significant reduction in financial support is due to a decline in overall construction on the University’s campus, primarily because of decreased funding from the legislature in recent years and the suspension of the state matching programs.

Unrestricted operating costs totaled $14.2 million in fiscal year 2012, representing a 6 percent increase over fiscal year 2011. This was largely due to the continuation of a multi-year plan to increase the fundraising capacity of the Foundation by hiring additional development officers and other key staff.

RECOGNITION:
The Presidents Club

Since 1977, the Presidents Club has recognized the University’s most generous donors—individuals, families, corporations and foundations—whose support, dedication and vision make positive things happen in our community, our state and beyond. Presidents Club honorees provide the backbone of critical private support that makes Florida State University a leader in teaching, research and public service. The five societies, named for historically significant dates, benefactors and University presidents, recognize donors with cumulative giving of $10,000 or more to any college, department or academic program through the Florida State University Foundation.

1851 SOCIETY
$5 million or more total lifetime giving

On January 24, 1851, the General Assembly of Florida passed an act to open two seminaries of learning, one of which is now Florida State University. The Seminary West of the Suwannee River, predecessor to today’s Florida State, was established on the site where the Westcott fountain stands today.

FRANCIS EPPES SOCIETY
$1 million–$4,999,999 total lifetime giving

Tallahassee’s first mayor and a leading advocate for the Seminary West of the Suwannee River, Francis Eppes worked diligently alongside others to make Tallahassee the home of what would become Florida State University. Eppes, grandson of Thomas Jefferson, served on the board of trustees for 11 years, eight of which were as board president, and remained an ardent supporter of the University until his passing in 1881.

EDWARD CONRADI SOCIETY
$500,000–$999,999 total lifetime giving

After a statewide educational system reorganization in 1905, the University became the Florida State College for Women. President Edward Conradi oversaw the transition and many other accomplishments. Under Conradi, the institution became fully accredited in 1915 and grew to become the largest women’s college in the nation during the 1930s. Conradi also replaced the original site of the seminary with the administration building known today as the James D. Westcott Building. Conradi remains the longest serving president (1909–1941) in University history.

DOAK CAMPBELL SOCIETY
$100,000–$499,999 total lifetime giving

As Florida State University president from 1941 to 1957, Campbell oversaw a period of tremendous growth as veterans returning from World War II applied for admission to Florida State College for Women (FSCW). Under his leadership, FSCW grew to become the large coeducation institution known as Florida State University. Campbell was an avid supporter of the creation of the intercollegiate sports program; the football stadium bears his name.

ROBERT STROZIER SOCIETY
$10,000–$99,999 total lifetime giving

Although Robert Strozier, who served as president of Florida State University from 1957 to 1960, had a short tenure in office, his commitment to academic excellence and his depth of knowledge of the state education system did not go unnoticed. The University’s main library is named in his honor.
James D. Westcott Legacy Society

Deferred and testamentary gifts

James D. Westcott, a member of the Florida House of Representatives, became attorney general in 1868 and served as a state Supreme Court justice from 1868–1885. Upon his death, his will established a trust for the benefit of the Seminary West of the Suwannee River (West Florida Seminary). With this legacy, Westcott became the first donor and benefactor of the institution now known as Florida State University. The historic James D. Westcott Building on campus bears his name.

The Westcott Legacy Society recognizes the generosity of alumni and friends who have made an estate commitment or a deferred gift in support of the academic initiatives at Florida State University. Individuals who establish a planned gift such as a bequest, charitable gift annuity, charitable remainder trust or retained life estate play a key role in securing the University’s future. To learn more about how to leave your legacy for Florida State University, please contact the Office of Planned Giving at (850) 644-0753 or plannedgiving@foundation.fsu.edu.

Circle of Support

Loyal donors are the cornerstone of Florida State University’s success. In 2002, the Circle of Support was founded to recognize our many alumni and friends for their annual support. Donors can be recognized in both the Presidents Club and Circle of Support, as annual gifts count toward Presidents Club recognition.

Funding generated through annual gifts provides students with opportunities for learning and discovery, makes emergency aid available and helps Florida State University meet immediate needs and challenges. Every dollar shapes a Florida State University student’s future.

Individuals who provide annual gifts choose where their contributions go. Donors can make a gift to support any of the University’s colleges, divisions or programs, or an unrestricted gift, which provides a critical source of funding for the University’s greatest needs.

CIRCLE LEADER
$10,000 or more total annual giving

CIRCLE PARTNER
$5,000–$9,999 total annual giving

CIRCLE INVESTOR
$2,500–$4,999 total annual giving

CIRCLE PATRON
$1,000–$2,499 total annual giving

THE GOLDen RING SOCIETY
(GRADUATES OF THE LAST DECADE)
Recognition in the GOLDen Ring Society is reserved for graduates of the past 10 years who annually contribute $250 or more.

To learn more about making an annual gift or the Circle of Support, please contact Dan Krueger, assistant director of Annual Giving, at (850) 644-0771 or dkrueger@foundation.fsu.edu.
